The disclosure obligations in a divorce can be complex and confusing. Recalling what is required, when it is required, and what to do with any changes can be bewildering, not to mention remembering the penalties our clients may face for failing to live up to their disclosure obligations.

The adjacent chart is not a comprehensive analysis of the complex world of disclosure and fiduciary duties but is intended to be an easy-to-read roadmap describing our client's (and the other party's) basic disclosure obligations and responsibilities and what may befall them if their efforts are insufficient. ■ past 25 years, starting as a secretary and going through several promotions to her current position as Program Manager Specialist. Because her work day there starts early, she will be available from 3:00 in the afternoon onward to deal with ACFLS business and duties. Dee began working for ACFLS in 2009, and she was hired with the prospect of taking over Lynn's position when Lynn decided to retire, so she has been with ACFLS for 3 years.

Dee lives in Sacramento and has served as the informal hostess for the Sacramento Bar Association's Hospitality Suite at the Conference of Delegates held in conjunction with the State Bar Convention each year.

Dee's "significant other" is Aaron Cunningham. She raised two adult children as a single mom – Gary Rolewicz and Leanna Reynolds. Leanna and her husband Robert Reynolds are the proud parents of a new baby Robert, Dee's first grandchild, who was born just prior to the Christmas 2011 holidays.

Dee is the daughter of current ACFLS president, Diane Wasznicky. In her rare spare time, Dee enjoys traveling, especially to a time share in Mexico each fall, wine tasting, reading, and music.

We welcome Dee in her new position. She will attend and handle registration and other matters at the Spring Seminar to be held at Rancho Las Palmas in March.

The personnel committee will next handle the engagement of a new assistant in the coming months. ■
